REPORT ON TASK ALLOCATED- AUDITOR GENERALS OFFICE(FIJI)

Task Objective

The objective of the task allocated to the Fiji Audit Office to research and identify what types of training programs on money laundering is currently available out there in the private and public sector and to determine whether these may be relevant to the SAIs needs. We were to inform the Secretariat on the extent to which existing training programs cover the issues of:

- 1. Types of financial abuse: money laundering
- 2. Money laundering techniques
- 3. Money laundering typologies
- 4. Control procedure for the money laundering prevention system
- 5. Forty eight recommendations of FATF
- 6. Electronic money laundering
- 7. Supervision of financial institutions
- 8. Audit of the government's strategy to fight money laundering
- 9. Investigative techniques and intelligent sources to gather evidence against money launders
- 10. Financial intelligence unit

Findings

Listed in the above table are courses related to anti money laundering. The training courses identified above focused on explaining concepts on money laundering, techniques of money laundering and legislative requirements, whether local or international, in place relating to money laundering.

Most of the courses are targeted at employees of financial institutions who are obligated under the respective countries anti money laundering legislations to monitor and report on suspected money laundering transactions. The courses identified do cover adequately important concepts that auditors need to be aware of regarding money laundering such as:

11. Types of financial abuse: money laundering

12. Money laundering techniques

13. Money laundering typologies

14. Control procedure for the money laundering prevention system

15. Electronic money laundering

However the courses are not specifically targeting government auditors thus they do not cover important issues like how government auditors can audit a government's strategy to fight money laundering or how anti money laundering audit tests can be included in our normal audits. The courses do not specifically cover the following key issues which are relevant to SAIs:

1. Supervision of financial institutions

2. Audit of the government's strategy to fight money laundering

3. Investigative techniques and intelligent sources to gather evidence against money

launders

4. Financial intelligence unit

I also noted that the courses on Anti Money Laundering (AML) are concentrated only in developed countries or regions such as Europe and USA. Some regions such as the Pacific, Caribbean, Middle East did not have AML courses readily available to them.

Conclusion

Based on this I would recommend that the Taskforce considers the option of developing its own course on anti money laundering specific to the role of SAIs and adequately covering the above four points.

The IDI is currently exploring the development of electronic courses which can be made available through the internet. The Taskforce may consider requesting IDI to develop an electronic course on anti money laundering which could than be made available on the Taskforce website. Thus the course will be easily accessible by members of INTOSAI. For those developing SAIs which do not have easy access to the internet, this course can be made available through CD roms for delivery on stand alone computers. Having an electronic course would ensure easy access to the course by SAIs in the different regions. It will also enable the Taskforce and IDI to easily update the course content in line with developments in the course subject.
